MATHEWS TO ATTEND
N. E. A. CONVENTIONPresident of Normal School to Read
Paper at Session of National Education Association

President A. J. Matthews, of the Tempe Normal School departed Thursday night for California and will spend the next three weeks or so in that state in attendance at the meetings of the National Educational Association at Oakland, viewing the San Francisco and possibly the San Diego exposition, and caring for sundry business matters in the interests of the local school. Mr. Matthews' chief mission is to be present at the convention of the Educational Association that opens in Oakland on the coming Monday morning. He is a director and member in several of the important departments of the organization and will devote much of his time to work of the convention while it is in session. At a meeting the middle of next week, he will read a paper on "What to Stress and What to Shun in the Preparation of Elementary Teachers."

It is quite possible that Tempe will be presented at the convention by several other pedagogues, members of the normal and high school faculties.

RETURNED FROM VACATION
Miss Ruth Bodkin returned night before last from her vacation spent as the guest of her brother at Camp Verde, Arizona. While there she enjoyed the opportunity to visit a number of scenic marvels in that vicinity.

THE WRONG ONES

The London Stock Exchange, after the terrible loss of the Lusitania had been ascertained, marched in mass to the house of commons to demand the internment of the Germans resident in England.

The members of the exchange, corpulent, middle-aged, ruddy men, marched through the streets without banners or inscriptions of any kind. They were preceded by an escort of police. Hence certain regrettable misunderstandings.

In Chancery Lane, for example, an old lady took these English brokers who were demanding the internment of the Germans for Germans on the way to be interned, and shaking her umbrella, she cried:
"Round them up, the devils! Round them up!" — New Orleans States.
